RECEIVED

Dear Mr. President:

You were more than kind to write to me as you did on December 30th from Augusta. The NEW YORK TIMES article which you mentioned and which was an attempt to brief a piece in FORTUNE magazine, lifted a sentence out of context and it does not reflect my state of mind. I am attaching a copy of the article itself in case you care to look at it. I am sure that it was intended to be sympathetic and friendly.

It seems to me that the worst of my troubles may be over. Surely, the kind of support that I have received from you and those around you is everything that anyone could ask. The novelty of being under fire has surprised and concerned me, but I would not want you to think that I am depressed. The contrary is the case.

Faithfully yours,

Lewis L.

The President
