Dear Ann:

Here for your records is a copy of the Citation which the President signed for me this morning. I am taking it to Los Alamos next week and would like to keep it under wraps meanwhile.

Sincerely,

Lewis L. Strauss

CITATION

The Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, as the Nation's principal institution for the development of atomic weapons, has continued to discharge its responsibilities to the people of the United States with highest distinction and by its achievements has rendered invaluable service to the Nation and the free world.

The Laboratory's momentous success in the field of fission weapons has been followed by equal accomplishments in the fusion field. These achievements are the result of a remarkable group endeavor and the devoted and skillful effort of the individuals of the staff of the Laboratory.

In recognition of the outstanding achievements of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory and their contribution to the welfare and collective security of this Nation and the free world, this citation is awarded to the Laboratory as a means of expressing to all its members the gratitude of the people of the United States of America.
